

WOMAN TRIES TO SAVE WOUNDED BURGLAR

Drags Him Three Blocks from House Where He Was Shot to a Doctor's Office.

SHE WAS HIS "LOOKOUT"

Woolen Merchant Fired at Intruder as He Climbed Into His House in Passaic—Burglar Likely to Die.

Theodore Talpey, a manufacturer of woolens, who was alone and ill in bed at his home, 108 Pennington Avenue, Passaic, last night, heard a repeated ringing at his doorbell, but did not leave his bed to answer it. A little later he heard the noise of some one fumbling at a window on the ground floor. Getting out of bed, he armed himself with his revolver, and crept downstairs. Just as he reached the door leading to the dining room he heard a noise of shattered glass, and a moment later saw the form of a man outlined in the window frame. He took aim and fired. The intruder fell back with a cry.

Mr. Talpey says that as he looked out, he saw the man running into the street, where a woman was awaiting him. The two disappeared before he could give an alarm.

Half an hour later, an Italian physician three blocks from the Talpey home, was called to his door by a young woman who was half dragging, half supporting a badly-injured man. The physician examined the man, and found he had a bullet in the right side of the head. The case seemed too serious to be treated outside of a hospital, and he telephoned to the police to call an ambulance.

Detective Sergeant Turner was at once dispatched to the house, and questioned the young woman. She said she was Jane Murray of 237 Grove Street, Jersey City, and that her companion, James Hanly, of the same address, had been walking with her half an hour ago.

Presently, she said, he left her for a moment, not saying where he was going. A few minutes later he returned, staggering towards her, with a bullet wound in his head. He could not explain how he had received it, she said.

Turner, after learning of the shooting at the Talpey home, arrested the woman as a suspicious person, and had Hanly removed to St. Mary's Hospital, a prisoner, charged with burglary. There it was said he could not live through the night.

With Capt. Larkins, Turner then went to the Grove Street house and made a thorough search of the room Hanly had occupied. He found several articles of jewelry, part of which he identified as having been stolen recently from houses in Passaic.

HEARST LEAVES BOY SCOUTS

Dewey and Levy Also—Organization's Methods to Go Before Authorities.

William Randolph Hearst, Admiral Dewey, and Congressman-elect Jefferson M. Levy have resigned from the American Boy Scout organization. Mr. Hearst, who was the President, in his letter to the Directors gives as his reason the methods of financing adopted in his absence. His letter, in part, reads:

I do not approve of the management or of the methods. I think a great deal of the funds has been raised through false representation and in other manners that I heartily disapprove of.

I have learned that a part of the moneys collected was collected through the improper use of my name among my personal friends and acquaintances, through false representation as to my personal desires or requests in the matter.

I know that Mr. John Drew, for instance, had contributed $1,000 upon what was represented to be a personal request from me. I had never made any such request, and when Mr. John Drew found out that fact he ordered the bank to refuse payment to your treasurer on his check.

I have learned that your committee, or rather a controlling clique in your committee, without consulting me or even informing me, allowed a percentage of 40 per cent. to solicitors collecting funds.

Mr. Hearst concludes by saying he will lay the conduct of the organization before the Attorney General or the District Attorney. Mr. Levy gives the same reason as Mr. Hearst for his withdrawal, but Admiral Dewey's letter was purely formal.

The city is to try an automobile fire engine. It will be delivered to the Fire Department and placed in commission in one of the busy downtown districts some time in the latter part of January next.
